PIPE DREAM OF A PROSPECTOR DISHED FOR THE DELECTATION OF CITY DWELLERS

Famished coyotes circled his lit camp throughout the night, seeking to steal the trifle of bacon that was his sole remaining sustenance. His horse, weakened from lack of food and water, was too weak to resist the attack of the hungry brutes, and he was compelled to beat them off time and again.

No money, no friends to grub-stake him, he was about to give up the struggle for fortune. Finally, just at dawn, when the sagebrush denizens had deserted him before the coming of the sun, he packed his scanty belongings and started west—started on the road that netted him a fortune of several hundred dollars.

This is the way "Jack" Yore—"Happy Jack" Yore, owner of half a dozen bonanzas in the Lone Mountain district of Nevada and former associate of the famous foursome of mines, Fair, Flood, Mackay and O'Brien, told the Call of how he found the Rip Van Winkle silver mine, sitting in an easy chair in his de luxe apartment at the St. Francis last night.

Bristling mustache and sombrero and toll worn fingers made up the picture of the old time miner, now a power in Nevada mining circles.

"I was bluer than indigo, and I was about all in that morning a year ago," said Yore, who came to San Francisco laden with ore of marvelous grade to submit to the assayer.

"I was hunting the Soldier's Dream, a mine supposed to have been discovered in '62 by Captain James Dougherty. It was a gold prospect and it ran 1200 ounces to the ton, so went the story that I picked up during my lonesome travels of years about the Nevada mountains.

"One slab of bacon, no flour and no water was my outfit. I had been unfortunate and my friends refused to stake me further. Down and out was my portion. Even my horse was a wreck of bones.

"One more trial," said I to myself and my plug, Skinny, "and then, if I fail, I'll go railroading."

"I lay down about 8 o'clock of a beautiful April night. The stars came out and they sure twinkled at me. I couldn't go to sleep; my stomach was too empty. Finally I tightened my belt and rolled over. Dozing I was when 'Yap, Yap-it-yao' went those half human brutes, the coyotes. They were fierce and they came within 10 feet of me. I shouted and they retreated. That is, they did at first.

"Just then a curious jackrabbit poked his nose over a ledge a few feet away. I knocked him down—he was half asleep I guess—with a rock. His flesh was no good and I threw him to the coyotes.

"They continued their attempts to get into my pitiful grub box and I continued to beat them off. Finally they dived at my faithful Skinny in a pack and had him down. Nothing but a firebrand saved the horse and my own hide. They were famished and desperate.

"All night I fought them and they went away at break of day. I took my belongings—I had no cartridges for my gun—and led Skinny. We hadn't gone 200 yards until I found it—found the Rip Van Winkle mine, which I since sold for $100,000. There was the ore lying on top of the ground, virgin ore, and tons of it. I thought I had found the Soldier's Dream.

"I took the ore to the assayer. He said it assays 2300 ounces to the ton. 'No, I didn't faint, but I couldn't believe him. So I went back and got another sample. It panned out the same and I knew I was a rich man. My financial struggles were over. After that I found half a dozen good mines and they are paying me enough today to allow me ease the rest of my life—ease for myself and my niece, whom I shall send to a swell boarding school."

He pointed to a beautiful little girl crossing the lobby with a companion. Her arm was in splints, broken her horse threw her in the sage brush several days ago on Yore's ranch near Carlin, Nev.

"She is 'Betty' Hood and she can ride anything in the line of horse flesh that Nevada can produce," said Yore proudly.

"Uncle" Jack brought little Betty here for expert medical treatment, as the bones had been cruelly set by a frontier physician and had to be broken over and reset.

Yore practically owns Carlin and its surroundings, he admitted, besides some of the best mines in the Lone Mountain region.

He attracted much attention from the fashionables of the St. Francis, by reason of his democratic dress and ways and his willingness to "buy" on the slightest provocation.

A PRIVATE STOCK

of good wines and liquors should be in every home where the aged are in constant need of a little pure stimulant. We can confidently recommend our brands of wines and liquors as being perfectly pure, perfectly matured, and decidedly wholesome. They have not that fiery taste, that repels, but rather the mellow, natural, fruity flavor that makes them both pleasant and popular. The prices will meet your approbation.

OUR JULY CLEARANCE SALE

OFFERS YOU

One-Quarter, One-Third, One-Half Off

WHEN THE DOORS OPEN TOMORROW MORNING WE WILL PLACE ON SALE

EVERY LADIES SUIT IN THE HOUSE AT HALF PRICE

On the morning of July 4th, Mr. F. S. Hunt, owner of Hunt's Hygrade stores of Tonopah and Goldfield, and Mrs. J. Klinger, left Tonopah for the east, where manufacturers and importers of the world over have on display the accepted styles for fall and winter of 1913-14. Before Mr. Hunt left, his orders were: Make this July Clearance Sale the greatest value giving sale we have ever had; spare nothing; cut prices right and left; invite the people to compare prices with large city stores; there is nothing in the state that can compare quality of stock; do not allow a store in the west to get within 20 per cent as low in price!

During the absence of Mr. Hunt on his eastern buying trip, it is our duty to ignore cost marks and regular prices; we have but one object in view, and that is: dispose of the present stock at a price that will draw to this store every man, woman and child within the district of Tonopah. To make room is the essential thing, and with but a few weeks to do this, this great July Clearance Sale must be attractive from its opening. The first few days will practically close out some departments. The man or woman who delays may lose what has been most desired. At 8 o'clock tomorrow the sale begins.

We will obey Mr. Hunt's orders to a "T"; we have had but a short time to go through the stock—but it is large and the prices are low Butler Theater.

At the Butler theater tonight there will be shown a very interesting program of pictures as follows: "The New Pupil," an Edison comedy; a young violinist, smitten by a fair music teacher, decides to take lessons from her in order to become better acquainted. But she learns his identity and then begins a duel of wits. Of course the lady conquers and of course she surrenders in the end; "The New Sheriff," an Essanay western drama; "The Widow from Winnipeg," a Kalem comedy; "The Pawned Bracelet," a Lubin comedy. Tomorrow, Pathe Weekly No. 24, showing current events from all over the world, and "Mutt and Jeff;" "Hearts of the First Empire," a Vitagraph special in two reels. Saturday, "The Tragedy of Big Eagle Mine," a two reel Kalem feature.
